$50,000,000 BOND ISSUE

Looked Upon as a Means for the Building Up of an Army of Political Machine Workers.

If the $50,000,000 road bond issue is voted through this Fall, a vast amount will go for "machine" but not road machines.—Montrose Democrat.

Reports that the Republican party is dwindling away are confirmed by the announcement that Mr. Taft has lost eighty pounds since leaving Washington.—Hughesville Mail.

More and more as the days speed by the real backers of the $50,000,000 bond issue are made more apparent. They are, first and foremost, the Republican machine leaders, with Penrose and Senator Oliver leading the van. They need that $50,000,000 with which to build up an army of political workers throughout the state.—Connellsville News.

What is the difference between Senator Penrose campaigning for votes for himself along the midways of the county fairs and Secretary Bryan delivering lectures in Chattanooga tents? Mr. Bryan gives something to the people in return for their attendance and admission fee. You don't have to pay anything to hear Penrose and you get nothing if you do hear him.—Carlisle Evening Sentinel.

The latest suggestion of Senator Sutherland of Utah is that Roosevelt be given the Republican nomination in 1916. Sutherland claims to be a regular Republican. That proposition would be entirely acceptable to Democrats. We can stand it if the Republicans can. Wonder what the Phila. North American will say about Sutherland trying to steal its candidate for president?—Waynesburg Messenger.

The exposure of the full meaning of the New township road law and its political effect should arouse the people to a high pitch. "Under the guise of the laudable purpose of 'furnishing advice' to township road supervisors, which was the manner of its introduction to the Legislature, it has emerged as a measure that virtually robs the townships of self-government, places the expenditure of their money under the dictation of an appointee of the State Highway Bureau, and even goes so far as to prescribe that for failure to be subservient to state dictation the unruly townships may be deprived of the money to which they are entitled.—Huntingdon Monitor.

One of the potent factors in carrying Bucks County for the Democratic Presidential and local tickets last fall was the chain of strong Democratic clubs linking the active members of the party together from the upper to the lower end of the county. It was unfortunate that all of these clubs could not have maintained their organization. Such organizations can do a vast amount of good and they would have been particularly valuable this year as a means of instructing the voters in the new election laws.—Doylestown Daily Democrat.

Another attempt is being made to patch up the difference between the Republicans and the Progressives for the purpose of presenting a united front to the Democrats in the Congressional elections in 1914, and with the hope of getting together on a candidate for the Presidency in 1916. A movement which seems to have been inaugurated in protective tariff newspapers is using Colonel Theodore Roosevelt as a "get together" slogan. A singular fact in connection with this movement is that the progressive leaders are not enthusing over it. "Anything to defeat the Democrats and get back to the protective tariff and the Federal jobs" is to be the persistent cry of the Republicans in the campaign next fall. The staying qualities of the Progressives is worrying the stand-patters.—Perry County Democrat.

The greatest foe to the Good Roads Movement Pennsylvania has today is the Penrose-Tener-Bigelow machine and the insistence of that suspicious political combination in dominating the movement is doing it untold harm. No intelligent citizen is opposed to good roads. Everyone wants them but the people of the Commonwealth are adverse to placing the huge sum of fifty million dollars at the disposal of that gang down at Harrisburg. If they were reasonably certain the money would be spent honestly and economically in the improvement of the public highways there would be no serious objection but the experience in the erection of the State Capitol, when nine million dollars were squandered under a Penrose regime, is sufficient to put the voters on their guard now. If the gangsters were able to make away with nine millions on a four million job what might be expected when there are fifty millions at stake?—Armstrong Democrat and Sentinel.

Speaker Clark in the House the other day administered a well merited rebuke to certain of the Republicans who have been howling about the alleged injustice practiced by the Democratic committees and caucuses in pushing legislation and refusing to let the minority obstruct and delay things.

The Speaker casually referred to the days of Reed and Cannon, but it was enough. It must have reminded the Republicans that the iron tyranny of their majority in those epochs was, of course, in the public interest, while the use of Democratic power today is "gag rule" and "a stifling of the voice of the people."

It is never so amusing to have one's own ox gores as it is to see the other fellow's maltreated—especially in politics.—York Gazette.

In an item of one of the daily papers recently, Governor Tener is quoted as saying that he will do all in his power from now until the election to persuade the voters of the state to vote for the fifty million dollar bond issue for road building. The leading motive of the Governor in supporting this bond issue is not the building of good roads but the rebuilding of the old discredited reactionary Penrose-McNichol Republican machine and to give it the means with which to intrench itself in power for years to come. If the bond issue is authorized officers of the Highway Department will be appointed in every county of the state and every man of them will be a henchman of the machine devoting the greater part of his time to the strengthening of the gang to whom he owes his position. The money would be spent by an efficient Highway Department to favored contractors and a reign of treasury looting inaugurated that would surpass the State Capitol looting of the past. Not only would the fifty millions of dollars be squandered but the gang once again in control would find a way to add many more millions of dollars to be used for a similar purpose. Every patriot, every lover of clean, honest, efficient government, every foe of gang rule should vote against the bond issue and use all his influence to defeat the whole sinister proposition.—Weatherly Herald.

Senator Penrose did not deliver any such address here on Thursday as published in the newspapers. It is noticeable, however, that neither in his remarks at the Fair Grounds where he was heard by several hundred people, nor in the address credited to him in the papers, did he mention one argument in favor of a bond issue for good roads. He talked about good roads, which every one wants, and advised voting for the bond issue upon which opinion is divided, but gave no reasons except the inference that it would produce the good roads.

The fact is that the very evident anxiety of the Republican organization to have this bond issue endorsed is one of the chief reasons why it should not be endorsed. Taxpayers are justly suspicious when a political organization injects itself into a non-partisan question of this sort. Making good roads a political issue is a harm to the cause.

The farmer, who is supposed to profit by a bond issue, will likely not be misled by the specious pleas put forth. There are 90,000 miles of roads in the state, mostly earth roads. A $50,000,000 bond issue will build 2,500 miles, mostly automobile speedways. How is the farmer to profit by this plan?—Carlisle Sentinel.

The publication by a New York newspaper of an "offer" to give Mr. Bryan $8,000 a year conditioned on his refraining from further lecturing while Secretary of State was sheer impudence and unworthy of respect-ble journalism. Mr. Bryan's refusal to dignify the matter by comment is commendable. Friends and foes of Mr. Bryan are free to criticize his lecture trips from the standpoint of propriety if they feel so disposed, but the incessant nagging and misrepresentation by newspapers which have always been conspicuously hostile to the man and the principles he has so eloquently and effectively championed are simply reacting on his detractors. Whatever may be said for or against the propriety of a cabinet officer appearing on the lecture platform, it cannot be truthfully maintained that Mr. Bryan is neglecting his official duties for the lecture platform. To the contrary, he has given probably a larger share of his time to the duties of his office than is customary with other cabinet officers or than was the case with his recent predecessors. He has a perfect right to use in his own way the time that is his own. Certainly if he chooses to add to his income by giving lectures that are a source of pleasure, profit and inspiration to the people, that is less reprehensible than the selling of his talents to interests that oppress the people, which has been the means adopted by some of his predecessors to increase their bank accounts.—Hazleton Standard.

After the passage of the Democratic tariff bill Senator Penrose in an interview in the American Economist said: "In my own state of Pennsylvania scores of mills have already closed down."

That interview made the chills play tag up and down our spinal column. "Has the Democratic party made a mistake?" we asked ourselves. Then we went out in quest of mills that have shut down since the passage of the Democratic tariff bill. Here's the result:

"Yaller" Finnegan admitted closing his gin mill because people were too busy at work to loaf.

Grandmother Schmearkase of Apleschnitz Avenue admitted that her coffee mill is inactive because her boys are all at work and can't find time to run the mill as they were wont to run it when they were out of jobs under the Republican administrations. She now has her coffee ground by the grocer.

"Biff" Slugem was frank to admit that his prize fighting mill had shut down. His patrons are all working.

Out at Clapboardtown we found Adam Hoofnagel's cider mill shut down. No special cause was assigned. We presume, however, that the reason is that the Underwood tariff bill does not put a tariff on Adam's apples.

Yes, Boies, the mills are shutting down—all but the mills of the gods and they have been grinding your party so blamed fine that it will require the aid of a Lick telescope to find the remains.—Allentown Democrat.

Scribner's Magazine
Scribner's Magazine for October, under the title "The New Republic," gives Charles L. Freeston's impressions of Portugal, founded on a recent visit. He says that in many respects it is the most interesting country in Europe, full of surprises. The architecture, with its strong Moorish influences, is notable and the natural scenery is very unusual. The people are kindly to tourists. Being off the routes of travel it is the least-visited European country. Mr. Freeston's Life-History in this number describes the African elephant. He found the elephant, with the possible exception of the lion, the wisest and most interesting of all the kinds of big game. It wanders everywhere and goes from the lowlands to the high mountains. This gives great variety to its habits of life and adds to the difficulty of making generalizations from a few cases. Mr. Freeston's descriptions embody his own observations and those of men who have hunted with him.

ATTORNEY IS $76,000 SHORT

Has Been Missing Since August 21—Victim Homeless.

That Attorney Harvey M. Berkeley of Somerset, Bully Moose candidate for Congress last fall, is apparently an embezzler to the extent of $76,000 was disclosed in the Somerset County court last Saturday, when his books as secretary and treasurer of the Somerset Telephone Company were examined. Stock market speculations and failure to realize his Congressional ambitions are blamed.

Berkeley has been missing from Somerset since August 21. The last seen of him was in Uniontown, where he is reported to have obtained $500 on a personal check drawn on a Somerset bank, which later was protested. For many years prior to 1906 he was cashier of the First National Bank of Somerset, and ranked high in financial circles.

Berkeley was an active church worker and never smoked or drank. Confidence in him made it possible for him to get large loans by giving telephone stock as collateral. Berkeley's law office was opened on an order issued by the Somerset court, on a petition of creditors of Samuel D. Livengood, president of the defunct Farmers Bank of Meyersdale, for whom Berkeley had been assignee. All books, papers, etc., found in his office were taken into court and are in charge of Prothonotary Aaron F. Heiple.

According to the books found in the office, 3,069 shares of fictitious stock were issued, representing at par value $76,725.

The telephone company being a paying enterprise, Berkeley had no trouble in placing the stock as collateral for loans.

Berkeley's accounts as assignee in the Livengood estate are reported tangled. Livengood is $2 and recently applied for admittance to the Somerset Poor House. Berkeley some time ago filed a partial account as assignee in which the creditors of the defunct bank received 17 cents on the dollar.

BELGIAN CUCUMBERS

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

The county of Vernon in a certain middle state was at peace. Farmers, mechanics and merchants met each other and asked:

"How is old Vernon county?"

And the answer would be:

"Old Vernon county is all right—you bet!"

Fifty men saw X. M. Davis, as he came to be known, when the bus drove up to the inn at Clifton with him as the only passenger. He was a middle aged man, and he had the face of a true American patriot. He had come to give Vernon county such a chance to get rich as had never been held out to her before. Years ago his grandfather had died and had been buried in that county, and it was consecrated ground to him. That is why he had come to it instead of any other county.

Mr. Davis had come to Clifton direct from Europe. He had gone over there to study the agriculture of the country at his own expense. He had returned with what might be called a great find. The Belgians were almost secretly growing a specimen of cucumber that was bound to revolutionize the world. It was amazingly prolific.

One acre of ground would grow 5,000 cucumbers, each three feet long and weighing five pounds.

It was like eating oranges. It was a breakfast food in itself. It left behind it an exhilaration not known to any other vegetable in the world.

This cucumber was certain to take the place of grains of all sort in a year or two more and would displace the potato and the turnip entirely.

Mr. Davis did more than talk and exhibit seeds. He put $50 cash in bank as a prize to the person raising the most Belgian cucumbers the next spring or summer. It was November then. Between November and April Mr. Davis sold over $3,000 worth of seeds and received his money for them. When he went away he went boldly, and he left the prize money in the bank. By so doing he escaped all suspicion.

Now came a mystery. In Clifton lived a widow named Lee. She had been there only two years, and the people knew little about her. She was nearly six feet tall, rugged and strong, and she neighbored with none. She went to Mr. Davis for some seeds, but refused to pay the price. She offered only a penny apiece and when turned down made use of some very strong language.

April was a forward month in Vernon county, and the cucumber vines were beginning to run by the middle of May. One night some one pulled up and stacked the vines in ten different gardens. They found tracks of a man's boots, but nothing further. The next night more gardens suffered. Just who to suspect was a puzzle, but of course it was a case of jealousy and spite. Every man who had any vines set a watch on them.

Duncan Tracy was the first one to report a clue. He had half an acre of vines and was sitting up to watch for the vandal when a man came suddenly upon him and knocked him senseless. When he recovered his wits his vines had been destroyed. Tracks left by a man's boots—that was all.

Of course there were excitement and indignation. A reward of $5 was offered for the arrest of the marauder, and owners of vines as yet untroubled hired watchmen. Then the man of night betook himself out among the farmers. He raided far and wide. He destroyed nothing but the cucumber vines, but he did not spare a hill of them that he could get at. He was chased by men and dogs; he was shot at; traps were set for him in twenty different places, yet no one earned that reward.

At Farmer Johnson's place he and his son were hidden in the smoke house when the unknown appeared. He had scarcely pulled a vine when they were upon him. Both were strong men, but the struggle was over in a minute. The unknown knocked them both silly and got away with their hats and pieces of their shirts as souvenirs. It was figured that he had got such a scare, however, that he would not appear again. He returned next night when no one was watching and attacked the vines.

The excitement was now at fever heat, and the whole county was asking what should be done, when the marauder came to his end. A widow named Jones had twenty hills of vines she was watching. She had an old army carbine, and a neighbor had loaded it for her. She was watching from a window, and as the man of night appeared and began his work she fired at him. He dropped, but struggled up and ran.

A hundred men turned out and searched the streets and alleys and the country around, but they did not find the wounded man. They had given up the quest when word went round that no one had seen the Widow Lee for three days. The locked doors of her house were broken open, and she was found dead on the floor. A bullet had struck her in the chest—the bullet fired by the other widow. She was dressed as a man from head to heel and had false whiskers besides.

The Belgian cucumbers? Oh, they were a fraud, of course—just plain, everyday American cucumbers, with the usual 99 per cent water. It's just as easy to swindle a whole county as it is to swindle a single man. All you have to do is to get a new idea.

PLEDGE OF ECONOMY

Ignored by Democrats Says Hon.
Warren Worth Bailey

VERY DEFINITE VIEWS

Expressed by Our Representative in Congress Regarding the Enormous
Growth of Expenditures.

"Staggering sums spent on battleships, fortifications and other naval and military items" are unnecessary and profligate, according to Representative Bailey, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, who points out to his party that unless the pruning knife is wielded with wide sweeps the country will never know the difference between Democratic economy and Republican ideas of expenditures. In a statement made for the Washington Star, Representative Bailey says that he does not retract the word "perfidy," used by him in characterizing what he fears is the purpose of his party in keeping expenditures up to the old extravagant Republican level. "There isn't any other word to fit the case," he said, "if the Democrats forget or ignore the pledge of economy they made at Baltimore."

Where Knife Should Be Used
Representative Bailey expresses very definite views regarding the growths which call for the pruning knife. "First of all," he said, "I would lay the ax at the root of the tree of militarism. In no direction has the growth of expenditures been so riotous as in that of army and navy appropriations. Hundreds of millions have been worse than wasted on what they have called 'preparedness,' and now all the big navy boomers and all the jingoes who shout for more soldiers and more guns and more fortifications are telling us that we are farther from a state of preparedness than ever."

Mr. Bailey said he didn't believe much in "snipping a little here and a little there," and added:

"Many a mickle makes a muckle, but it was not of the little wastes and extravagances I was thinking when I suggested to the Democratic leaders that in proposing to raise a revenue equal to that which the Republicans have been wringing from the people they were inviting profligacy, while failing to keep faith with the country. I was thinking of the staggering sums which we are spending on battleships and destroyers and fortifications and other naval and military items. As a beginning I would be satisfied with some liberal slashing here; and then it might be advisable to slash more or less when we reach the rivers and harbors. In a large measure the river has ceased to be a highway. Yet gigantic schemes for river improvements are in contemplation, and they will be urged on Congress with all possible insistence, on the plea that the waterway will provide an effective check upon the railroad."

Railway Enjoys Monopoly
"This overlooks the obvious fact that the railroad has already put the waterway out of business and that it laughs at water competition."

"That the annual waste by the Republicans has been three hundred millions may or may not be true," Mr. Bailey said. "As I recall it, Nelson W. Aldrich set that figure as the measure of waste, and the Rhode Island Senator was not given to hyperbole except in extolling the beneficence of the sacred tariff. I don't pretend to know just how much we are wasting. But I feel sure that it must be more than we would waste were we to reduce the volume of revenue through a genuine reduction in the burden of taxes."

"This is why I take the ground that the first step toward economy and that simplicity which befits a Democratic government is a reduction in the revenues. We have been gouging too much money out of the people. There would have been a revolution long ago had we gouged it out of them by the rude processes of direct taxation. By the refined methods which are actually in vogue we have done the job very handsomely and without extorting more than a complaint about 'hard times,' 'over-production' and 'lack of confidence.'"

Should "Cut to the Bone"

"I am sincerely of the belief that it is of the first importance that the Democrats should cut the federal revenues to the bone. They have made the country believe them regarding what they have said about Republican extravagance, and the country is going to hold them to a strict account of their stewardship. If they prove as wanton, as reckless, as extravagant, as wasteful as the Republicans were charged with having been, then so much the worse for the Democrats. They will find it no easy task to convince the country that another change is not desirable."

Mr. Bailey said further that in his judgment the "pork barrel" was a splendid investment in comparison with some items in the national budget against which never a protest is raised. "When the government erects a public building somewhere it usually gets value received," he said, "and usually the building pays for itself; but your ten and fifteen million dollar battleship is junk by the time it gets afloat, or, if it isn't that, it is a constant temptation to take it out on a quest for trouble."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

FOOD SUPERSTITIONS.

Diak Warriors Won't Eat Fear For Fear of Becoming Timid.

In rural Germany one still meets with a superstition that he who eats during a thunderstorm will be struck by lightning. Abstaining from food during an eclipse is common among savages; also a belief that in eating the flesh of any animal one absorbs that animal's characteristics. Thus an Indian tribe highly prizes tigers' flesh as food for men, but forbids women to eat it lest it make them too aggressive.

In the Kongo women are forbidden to eat birds of prey on the same principle, but are encouraged to eat frogs, which the men on no account ever touch. In the Caroline islands blackbirds are a favorite dish with women, but men must not eat them, because if one did and afterward climbed a cocoa tree he would surely fall to the ground and be killed.

Among the Dyaks warriors must not eat venison because it would make them as timid as the deer. Fowls and eggs are forbidden to women of a Bantu tribe because on eating either a woman would certainly fly into the brush and never again be seen. Again, the flesh of many animals is forbidden because the animals themselves—for example, swine—are disagreeable to the eye or have untidy habits. Exchange.

BAD FOR PRONUNCIATION.

Silent Reading and Neglect of Conversation Are Harmful.

Perhaps the most potent of influences toward diverse pronunciation, especially difference in accent, is the fact that we seldom or never hear in conversation a vast number of words which nevertheless constitute an important and indispensable part of our vocabulary.

"By silent reading and neglect of conversation language itself," declares Richard Grant White, "is coming into disuse." The result of this practice is not only that we are always mentally registering pronunciations peculiar to ourselves, which we have no means of ascertaining to be uncommon or ridiculous, but also that the natural tendencies of our language, unrestrained by the conservative force which occasional use in conversation might exert, rapidly foster new pronunciations and produce a diversity of pronunciation even among the most careful speakers.

All these influences obviously supplement each other in resisting any trend toward uniform pronunciation and facilitate the progress of the tendencies of speech peculiar to our English tongue.—Robert J. Menner in Atlantic Monthly.

A Fleet Street Story.

Henry Arthur Broome, in "The Log of a Rolling Stone," says that in 1871 he was engaged in wood engraving for Punch when one day, at the end of the week, short of money, he stood gazing longingly at the cherries on a costermonger's barrow which stood abreast of the offices of the London Telegraph. His gaze arrested the attention of a gentleman whom he had often seen there before, though not at midday.

Then a kindly deed was done. The gentleman, averting his gaze from me a moment, purchased two paper bags of this fruit. Then, placing one of them in the pocket of his capacious dust coat, he turned to me with the sweetest smile imaginable and without a word offered the other one to me, which I gratefully accepted. He then passed on and went upstairs to the offices of the newspaper. That was my first introduction to the prince of journalists, George Augustus Sala.

A Limit to His Power.

A curious historical anecdote is handed down from the time of James I. James, being in want of £20,000, applied to the corporation for a loan. The corporation refused. The king insisted. "But, sire, you cannot compel us," said the lord mayor. "No," exclaimed James, "but I'll ruin you and the city forever. I'll remove my courts of law, my court itself and my parliament to Winchester or to Oxford and make a desert of Westminster, and then think what will become of you!" "May it please your majesty," replied the lord mayor, "you are at liberty to remove yourself and your courts to wherever you please; but, sire, there will always be one consolation to the merchants of London—your majesty cannot take the Thames along with you."

TRIP TO PALESTINE

Most of the villages of this plain consist of flat-roofed houses built of sun-dried bricks. Before the train reaches Damascus it goes through a very rugged and barren region and one wonders where to look for a large city in country like this. This ancient "Port of the Desert" is best understood and appreciated when first viewed from a mountain (1,800 feet high) back of the city. From there we see it a perfect paradise of semi-tropical trees and plants that at first seem to almost smother the buildings. This luxuriance is due to seven rivers or so-called rivers that flow through the city. A great number of caravan routes branch out from Damascus in all directions from Egypt to the wonderful lands of Babylon and Nineveh across the wide desert to the east. Thousands of camels, ships of the desert, traverse these routes laden with anything from the silks of China, the spices of Arabia and the carpets of Persia to Standard Oil of New York or Schlitz Beer of Milwaukee.

Owing to the abundance of water, practically every large house in the city has an open court in the center with a continually playing fountain. On account of the long dry summers water is a great treasure to the Syrian who possesses it in large quantities. This is what makes Damascus the "Port of the Desert," where caravans may find a haven after long days of travel over the burning deserts that surround the city. The traveler is still shown the wall from which St. Paul was let down and also the street called Straight. There are some remains of Roman civilization yet to be seen and one can visit the tomb of the great Saracen, Saladin, who fought the Crusaders, but by far the most interesting sight is the population of the city as it is today with its curious mixture of the Orient and the Occident.

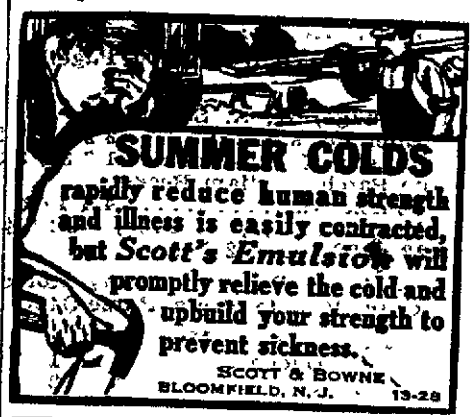

After spending a day in Damascus we boarded a train on the Mecca Pilgrim Railroad that was built to carry Mohammedan pilgrims to their sacred city. The line was built and equipped by German engineers, so it is quite modern and speedy. We left the city at about 8 a. m. and rode southward until 4 o'clock the next morning through the very historic country east of the Jordan River to a little town in the desert called Maan, where we left the railroad to continue on our way by caravan. There were still twenty-five miles to cover before we would reach our destination, so we had to procure such animals as the town afforded to carry us and our baggage over the desert and sagebrush plain. We finally managed to hire four camels, three horses and nine donkeys of the size of large jackrabbits.

While the camels were being loaded with our cooking outfit, campbeds, etc., they roared and grunted as though they were complaining about the weight of their burdens. The drivers are very skillful in tying heavy loads on camels or donkeys. One can frequently see them striding along loaded with lumber, stones, iron beams, straw or even a large piano.

We made quite an imposing appearance as we started out over the burning plain with two Arab soldiers to protect us and with about six Arab donkey and camel drivers to keep things moving. They were barefooted but they did not seem to mind the sharp stones on the trail as they ran behind the donkeys and punched them along or as they fought and cursed one another about the load. After a while the moon came up and then it was very pleasant indeed to travel, as the moonlight of Palestine is beyond comparison, and in the evening the weather is cool. At about 10 p. m. we set up our campbeds and went to sleep with only the sky and the stars above us. During the night it became so cold that those who were prepared for only warm weather almost froze, figuratively speaking. The new day, however, soon made us forget that it had been cold during the night and we thought that we were in the torrid zone.

We started on the last stage of our journey that morning and after traveling two or three hours through narrow valleys and gorges that seemed to be leading down and down to sea level; and through a high, narrow canyon that made us think we were traveling down into the center of the earth, we reached our camping place in the heart of the very ancient (900 B. C.) Nabatean city called Petra.

The city was practically inaccessible to all but the inhabitants as it was surrounded by high mountains and could be entered only through narrow passes or canyons. The buildings were not made like ordinary buildings but were carved in the face of the cliffs. One can see many fine ornamental housefronts on the face of the cliffs but he sees no house, and on looking further discovers that the interior of the house is simply a hole or room carved out of the solid mountainside with no opening except the front. Evidently these people loved amusements as we saw there an outdoor theater with a seating capacity of about 4,000 people. It too was cut out of the solid rock on the side of a hill. During our week's stay there we made walking excursions every day, and one of these was a trip to the top of Mt. Hor to the tomb of Aaron. This was a very exhausting trip as we had to make a wide detour to elude two soldiers and a lot of fanatical Mohammedans who were on the watch to prevent our visiting the place. A large mob of them was waiting for us at our camp when we got back. They were very angry and each man of them had an old rifle, but our guide, who is a very tactful man, soon quieted them by telling them that we were all officers from our country and that it would be best for them not to make any trouble. These people are all very ignorant and illiterate and they have a healthy fear of all western governments. They call all foreigners "Ingiliz" or English.

From Petra we went back to the railroad and traveled northward some distance to a station called Zizeh, where we were going to begin our tour through the lands of the Moabites, the Ammonites, etc. We found horses there and at once started out on one of the trails, not roads, over a very fertile plain from which a crop of wheat had been recently harvested. Before we had gone very far we saw a large flock of storks that seemed to be on a vacation from their native homes on the rooves of German houses. We traveled a long time but could see no signs of human habitations whatever. It seemed that the country had been deserted, but before long we saw in the distance what looked like a number of black cattle grazing near each other. On coming nearer, however, we learned that what we saw was a small Bedouin tent village. The Bedouins are half civilized Arabs who live in low black tents made of goat hair and who, like nomadic Israel, move from one place to another in search of pasture for their flocks and herds. A little farther on we came to a real village of flat-roofed stone houses. This proved to be the dwelling place of the people who farm all the land in the neighborhood. They have to live together for protection, and they bring all their grain to one place to thresh it so that they can keep the wild Arabs from stealing it. It was not far from here over the plains of Moab to Mt. Nebo, which we climbed, and, as Moses here got his last view of the Promised Land, it was from here that we first had the opportunity of looking across the awful chasm of the Dead Sea to the kills and plains of Judea, Galilee and Samaria. On a clear day one can see from Mt. Herman on the north to the Mt. of Olives on the south.

Like Moses we then turned back into the land of Moab, but unlike him, we expected to enter the Promised Land later. We just had time enough to go from Mt. Nebo on to Heshbon till noon and there eat our lunch on the site of the stronghold of old Sihon, king of the Amorites.

During the afternoon we traveled for hours without seeing a house or a village but we did see thousands of camels, sheep and goats grazing on wheat stubble land. I have never seen so many animals together as I saw there. The end of a 45 mile ride that day brought us to the Decapolis city, Philadelphia, (in Old Testament history Robboth-Ammon). We camped there on the top gallery of a well preserved theater and our cook made a kitchen out of the private box of the king.

During all our travels thus far we had seen no wheeled vehicles at all. The people did all their carrying by means of pack animals. It seems that the Arabs care nothing about such new fangled things and besides they have no roads on which to run wheels; but here at Philadelphia it was different, as the inhabitants are Circassians who have come down into this country from Russia. They are very enterprising and one of the improvements they have introduced is the ox-cart. Some of the carts are mounted with long wicker baskets in which loose grain is hauled. These northern folk have brought with them most of their home customs and ideas, and they even wear their heavy fur caps and long woolen coats here in this hot country. They are destroying the ancient buildings and landmarks here by taking out the stones and using them for their own purposes.

Another day's journey took us across the Brook (or River) Jabbok to another city of the Decapolis, namely Jerash. Here we found ruins that showed that this had been a very typical town of the best Graeco-Roman days. Rome was the great temporal power and Greece was the exponent of culture that produced these great centers. A Roman road enters the town through a magnificent triumphal archway. The streets are lined by fine large columns and at every cross-street there is a tetrapylon, an ornamental structure made of four columns with capitals and other decorations. Within the limits of the city there are splendid remains of a naumachia (an artificial lake for mimic sea fights), two excellent amphitheatres, two very beautiful pagan temples, a forum surrounded by a circular colonnaded enclosure, Roman baths, aqueducts, tribunals, etc. Everything seemed to have been built for outdoor life.

From Jerash we journeyed back over the Jabbok again with Jacob and spent the night on the plain by a spring, where we had to take turns as night-watchmen to prevent the Arabs from stealing our horses. The next day we entered the land of Gilead where we found specimens of the plant that produces the "Balm of Gilead." Gilead is a very healthful country and, besides being almost the only wooded part of Syria, is very famous for its grapes. Practically the whole country is covered with vineyards. We stopped at the tomb of Hosea to eat our lunch and while we were there a man came to us and asked for "backsheesh," and when we asked him who he was he said that he was the "son of Hosea." This seemed a little thin so we did not give him any money.

Our next stop was at the city of Salt, where we were given a great banquet by a very rich native who is a friend of the College. From Salt our journey continued down and down about 3,000 feet to the valley of the Jordan, which, with the Dead Sea, forms the deepest gorge on the surface of the earth. The Dead Sea is 1,200 feet below the level of the Mediterranean and of course the Jordan is not much higher. We bathed in this stream and ate our lunch by the bank. The river is very swift and is always muddy. Although it does not average over 100 feet in width it is fordable in only a few places. A number of us went to the Dead Sea that afternoon and bathed in it. The water is so salty that one can float on it like a chip without any fear of sinking. The water has a sulphurous smell and its taste is beyond description.

We camped on the outside of Jericho that night by Elisha's Spring. This spring and the very hot climate make Jericho a veritable tropical garden with a luxuriant growth of banana, date-palm, pomegranate and banyan trees. The people of the city are and always have been of a very inferior class on account of the intense heat that beats down upon this very low valley.

We were very glad to leave it the next day and start on the last stage of our journey to Jerusalem. We passed by the place where Elisha was said to have been fed by the ravens and stopped at the Good Samaritan Inn. We did not fall among thieves but the proprietor of the Inn did "take us in" by selling us some of his antiques.

At about 3 p. m. we arrived at Bethany and had pointed out to us the tomb of Lazarus, the house of Mary and Martha and the house of Simon the Leper. One can take little stock in the authenticity of these places, but one can look upon the town and the country-side and feel that it is about the same as it was when Jesus visited his friends here.

From Bethany we descended into the Valley of Jehosaphat, where there are as many Jews buried as can possibly be put there as they think that it will be here that Gabriel will first blow his trumpet and those who are so fortunate as to be buried there will rise first. From this valley we entered the city of Jerusalem by the Joppa or Jaffa gate.

Jerusalem is a hard city to describe. It is a curious mixture of the old and the new. One can find here many truly religious people and many religious fanatics and cranks. Because Jerusalem is the "Holy City" all kinds of denominations want to be represented there by some kind of colony or institution. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre, which is supposed to be on the site of the crucifixion, and the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem are in the hands of five different denominations who have their particular corners and their particular times for worshipping. Turkish Mohammedan soldiers sit in the churches all the time to keep the Christians from fighting each other.

Three-fourths of the population are Jews and a great many of these are paid by rich Jews elsewhere to live here and pray for them in Zion. One can see hundreds of them praying and weeping by the only part of

ANOTHER BEDFORD CASE

It Proves That There's a Way Out for Many Suffering Bedford Folks.

Just another report of a case in Bedford. Another typical case. Kidney ailments relieved in Bedford with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Mary J. Corle, 218 E. Pitt St., Bedford, Pa., says: "I had backache and other symptoms of kidney trouble and nothing seemed to do me any good. The kidney secretions were unnatural and my health was badly run down. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I got a box and I had not used them long before I found that they lived up to representations. I am now feeling better in every way and my kidneys do not trouble me. You may continue the publication of my former endorsement."

the original temple wall that remains. Little tots three years old and old men and women as well as the people between these ages kiss the stones of the wall and pray for the time when the "heathen" may be expelled.

I visited the Mt. of Olives, Gethsemane, the site of the old Temple (now the mosque of Omar), Pool of Siloam, and a number of other interesting places that lack of space will not permit mentioning.

On leaving Jerusalem I went down through the Hill Country of Judea and across the Plain of Sharon where Samson had his difficulties with the Philistines, to the seacoast at Jaffa where Peter had his great vision. I sailed northward from there, stopping at Mt. Carmel, and proceeded to Beirut where the journey ended. The trip throughout was a very interesting and enlightening one and one worthy of a far better description than I have been able to give here, but I fear that I have already taken up too much space in your columns.

Yours very sincerely,
A. M. Billman.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Lippincott's for October

The October Lippincott's follows up this publication's gratifying successes of the summer months with a budget of unusual variety and quality. The leading feature is a complete novel of swift movement and compelling interest—"Water-Witched Valley," by Elizabeth Dejeans, known for her melodramatic effects in fiction, for stirring action, and for pathos.

Prof. Albert Schinz of Bryn Mawr, contributes a noteworthy paper entitled "Walt Whitman, a World's Poet?" "The Wife of a Littlelander," by Forbes Lindsay, tells how the members of a certain community have solved the high-cost-of-living problem. "The Passing of the Sky-Acrobat," by Edwin L. Sabin; "Living up to One's Children," by Thomas L. Masson; "The Snobbery of Poverty," by Thomas Grant Springer, and "Aristocracy," by Ellis O. Jones, are brief papers that "carry a punch."

There's a generous number of pages of "Walnuts and Wine," the department of humor. Well-chosen poems by W. J. Lampton, Sara Teasdale, Ella Morrow Sollenberger, Richard Kirk and Mary Eleanor Roberts, and some witty epigrams by L. A. Browne, complete the number. The cover design is by Clarence Underwood.

ASK BUILDING FOR RED CROSS

Propose That It Be Memorial to Civil War Heroines.

Washington, D. C., September 29.—National Director Edward P. Bicknell, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Gen. George W. Davis and Senator Burton have urged the Senate Committee to put into the pending deficiency appropriation bill an appropriation of $400,000 for a building for the Red Cross to be a memorial to the Northern and Southern women of the Civil War. Miss Boardman said the Red Cross had administered fully $10,000,000 in relief work during the last seven and a half years.

The construction of the proposed memorial building would cost $700,000 and the Red Cross has received pledges of much of the additional $300,000.

FRIDAY MORNING, OCT. 3, 1913.

We wonder if the crowd would have been larger at the Fair last Thursday if the Hon. Boies had been here to deliver one of his speeches on the $50,000,000 bond issue. He certainly has been a drawing card (?) at other fairs held in the state.

The gentleman who was selling novelties at the Hartley Bank corner last Thursday night gave the voters of the borough some common sense advice as to whom they should elect as Chief Burgess at the coming election. Did you hear it?

A FEW COMPARISONS

At the Fair in 1908 the total entries were 978; this year the total entries were 1,523, an increase of 545.

In the women's department in 1912, there were 319 entries; this year 585, an increase of 266.

In 1908 there were 17 horses entered for premiums, in 1912 there were 40, and this year 44.

In 1908 there were 29 head of cattle entered, in 1912 there were 22 head, and this year 34.

In 1908, when gambling was permitted, the money paid for all privileges amounted to $317.50. This year the money paid for privileges was $422.90, a gain of $105.40.

THE FAIR DRAWS CROWDS

The attendance at the Fair last week was record-breaking. Not since Old Home Week has Bedford been so thronged with people as on Thursday, the big day of the Fair. The weather conditions were ideal and the roads, as a result of the special repairs made during the summer, were in splendid shape, the rain of the previous week having laid the dust. The grounds were barely sufficient to accommodate all the automobiles, carriages and other conveyances that sought admission to the enclosure. The parking of the autos alone required special attention from the managers.

A gratifying feature of the occasion was the good behavior of the crowds. Not an arrest was made during the week and the orderly conduct of the assemblages both at the grounds and on the streets was the subject of favorable comment on every hand. Following the custom of former years, special officers were employed for the week, but as one of them remarked, there was nothing to do but keep the people and the vehicles moving at the busy corners. Attendance of this character is the basis upon which increasingly successful fairs may be founded.

Phopthetic Vision

Editor Gazette,

Bedford, Pa.
Dear Sir:—I am not a prophet nor the son of a prophet, a Levite nor yet a wandering Jew, nevertheless in a prophetic vision I see a tragedy as deep and dark as can be woven of the warp and woof of mystery and death and woe at the Wolfsburg bridge. Only last Friday afternoon a buggy, containing a man, his wife and two little ones, was run into by an automobile and the buggy badly broken, and the automobilist, HOG, never slackened his speed to look after the damage he had done. A thing (I will not call him a man) that will do an act like he did, deserves the execration of all good people.

The body was brought to Everett on Tuesday, where funeral services were held and interment made.

HECKERMAN LETTER

Recipes for Making Peanut Soup and Tally.

Pittsburgh, Pa., October 1.—Here I am again in Room 302 of the Seventh Avenue Hotel, this city. I have occupied this room many times and I surely would be lost were I to go to any other hotel here. I was at the Capital Hotel in Johnstown a day last week. There I see both of the Bedford papers. Mr. P. L. Carpenter, the genial proprietor of the hotel, said that he subscribed for The Gazette just to read my letters and for the inquirer because it was of his political belief. Now no use talking boys this man Carpenter is a whole team with a yaller dorg under the wagon; always striving to do something for his guests to make them comfortable. I met Percy Middleton last week. Now Percy sells tobacco. He is one of the few who never touches drink of any kind. He looks well and feels that way, he says.

I have been coming to this venerable hotel for many years. 'Twas here that I first had peanut soup. By the way, I'll give you readers some formulas by which they can make as many toothsome dishes as they like from peanuts. When peanut butter was first brought forward, people awoke to the fact that peanuts had most wonderful nutritive properties, and many persons, who began to use this butter as soon as it was put on the market, still use it and proclaim the great good in peanut butter. A sandwich made by spreading peanut butter very thin on a butter thin cracker is one of the most tasty bites that you can imagine. Peanut soup is delicious when properly made. Here is a good formula for making this appetizing soup: Take two cupfuls of roasted peanuts; grind them in your meat grinder; mix them with a quart of milk and two quarts of water. Set it on the stove until it comes to a boiling point; add a cut-up onion and a cut-up stalk of celery and let it all simmer for two hours, after which strain it and add salt and pepper and you have a good and well flavored soup. I like it and shall be glad to have some of your readers try it and report to me. Next, here is a recipe for peanut taffy: Put two cupfuls of sugar in a granite saucepan. Heat it till it is all brown and all melted. Be careful and do not let it burn, but be sure that it is nice and brown through. Add a little lemon juice; then pour it over the blanched peanuts, arranged in buttered pans. Let it harden when it should be nice and brittle. Enough about the peanuts for this time.

Have you all been reading about the way Mr. Jerome, the lawyer of New York, has been following and persecuting Harry Thaw? In his vicious vindictiveness this bloodhound of New York overlooks the fact that, if Thaw is insane today, he has brought it on the man, and that public estimation of his work in the case from its incipency to the present moment is neither forced or fraudulent. We all know that Thaw was acquitted on the ground of insanity, thus spilling Jerome's plans to have him convicted of murder. Notwithstanding that verdict, he still hounds and pursues the man with all the venom that he can command. Someone nearby should hit him with a rotten egg right in the mouth. The idea of his going before the Governor of New Hampshire and asserting that money was beneath all, that the Thaws millions would not traduce the laws of New York. We all know that if Thaw is a lunatic, he cannot be convicted of a crime and no one knows this better than Jerome. He would not press for the conviction of a man whom in the eyes of the law is not accountable for his acts. I'll leave it to your readers to say whether or not Jerome's actions are not those of a man seeking revenge for his failure to convict Thaw when he had him before the court and jury. His relentless hounding of this man is nothing but persecution because it is without cause. Time now to throw the ripe tomato and bung his eye with it, says Dad.

By the by, I saw Joe Hammers today. Since he moved his place of business he has gotten as broad as he is long and his business has grown almost as fast as he is.

Please send me The Gazette to Staum Hotel, Wheeling, W. Va.

Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

Paint or Not

Is a horse worth more or less after feed?

Hay and oats are high today; shall I wait today and feed him tomorrow? That's how men do about painting their houses and barns and fences. Paint has been high for several years; and so they have waited. Paint is high yet; they are still waiting; thousands of 'em are waiting for paint to fall.

Their property drops a trifle a year and the next job of paint creeps-up creeps-up; it'll take more paint by a gallon a year; they don't save a cent, and the property goes on suffering.

Retires From Service

Among the P. R. R. employees retired at Altoona this week was a former Bedford man, William W. Poole, well known to many of our older citizens. In speaking of his retirement the Altoona Gazette says:

"William W. Poole, another of the veterans to lay down his tools, has worked for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in this city for the past thirty years. He was born September 26, 1847, in Bedford County, son of John W. and Mary P. Poole, and came to this city with his father in 1883, securing work in the freight car shop, where he has been employed ever since. Previous to coming to this city, Mr. Poole worked with his father at the blacksmith trade. He was never married and at present lives with his brother at 413 Fifth Avenue.

"He is a charter member of the Pennsylvania Railroad Relief Association, having joined when it first started, twenty-six years ago. Forty-five years ago, he injured his foot while in Cumberland, the member never healing properly. About six years ago, he fell from a box car while at work, the foot breaking open. Since then it has given him considerable trouble, resulting in his retirement. Mr. Poole expects to take the remaining years of his life easy, residing in this city."

NEW MACHINERY INSTALLED

P-Nut Factory Employees Working Night and Day to Fill Orders.

This week two new machines were installed in the P-Nut Factory which cost $1,300 each. They are intended to cut and wrap kisses and have a capacity equal to about 20 girls. This, however, will not throw any girls out of employment, and, even though there are now on the factory payroll over 190, yet they still need more girls at once.

Mr. Heckerman has on his files more orders than at any one time in the history of the plant and is running fully three weeks oversold, making it necessary to run 24 hours a day from this on until Christmas.

Another high priced machine just being added is a labeling machine to place labels on glasses of Ft. Bedford P-Nut Butter. In the candy department are more than thirty candy makers and helpers in charge of Tom Graffius and Ed. Leffert, and, if the help problem can be overcome, Mr. Heckerman will in the early spring build a separate building especially for the manufacture of candy.

The following amount of products was turned out last week: Sixty-four thousand pounds of candy, 1,200 cases, each case containing 24 glasses of p-nut butter; 7,000 boxes, each box containing 72 packages of salted p-nuts; 320 strings of grab bags, 2,200 10-pound cans of salted p-nuts, 65 barrels of blanched nuts and 2,000 cases of Fort Bedford and Happy Bill roasted p-nuts, each case containing 100 5-cent packs.

The following amounts show what some of the girls earned last week: Myrtle Jay, $10.68; Lena Marshall, $10.50; Rebecca Johnson, $10.45; Nettie Barton, $9.00; Ada Corle, $8.96; Eliza Davis, $8.43; Nellie Miller, $8.42; M. Barnes, $8.39; Goldie Corle, $8.38; Kathryn Moser, $8.39. In the factory paper "Peanutletters" of this week is published a list of all the employees, which run over 200. The weekly payroll from now on until Christmas will average $1,500. This surely means something to the Bedford business men, for practically all of this is spent at home. The factory loads out a solid car of products every day and the business this year will run well over half a million dollars.

An Employee.

Mrs. Susanne Beckley

Mrs. Susanne Beckley, widow of the late John Beckley, died suddenly of dropsy Wednesday morning of last week in Altoona at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary G. Amick. Deceased was born at Osterburg sixty-two years ago, but for the past eighteen years she resided with the Amick family. One brother and two sisters survive.

The body was brought to St. Clairsville Friday morning, where the funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. H. Zinn, pastor of the Lutheran Church. Interment was made in the church cemetery.

PENNSYLVANIA LEADS IN SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

Tour of the World in the Interest of Sunday School Work Led by Mr. H. J. Heinz of Pittsburgh.

There are more people go to Sunday School every Sunday in the State of Pennsylvania than in any other state in the Union. At the World's Sunday School Convention, recently held in Zurich, Switzerland, it was stated from the platform that "Pennsylvania leads the world in Sunday School activity." The largest delegation at that great world's gathering came from Pennsylvania—176 strong.

Mr. H. J. Heinz of Pittsburgh, whose 57 variety trade mark is known the world over, has made the Sunday School his fifty-eighth variety of activity. Mr. Heinz is president of the Pennsylvania State Sunday School Association and last spring he headed a commission appointed by the World's Sunday School Association to study Sunday School conditions in the Orient. The commission spent eleven weeks in Japan, Korea and China, and a report of their work by the use of the stereopticon will be given at the State Sunday School Convention to be held in Williamsport October 8, 9 and 10.

The program of the convention will contain speakers of international and world-wide reputation. This gathering will call together representatives from all Protestant Evangelical Sunday Schools, and plans will be made for a more aggressive work in all parts of the state.

John Sigel

John Sigel, whose sad death was announced in last week's Gazette, was a son of Stephen and Nancy Sigel and was born near the Mt. Pleasant Lutheran Church in East Providence Township, June 22, 1853. He died at the home of Henry Fletcher, three miles south of Clearville September 23, 1913, and was, therefore, aged 60 years, three months and one day. On September 30, 1885, he was united in marriage with Miss Katie Robison of Clearville, who died June 13, 1893. Two children by this union survive: Coy Sigel of Elmira, N. Y., and Miss Alma at home. Mr. Sigel was married again on March 17, 1897, to Miss Nora B. Deyarmin of Everett, who, together with the above named children survives.

The funeral took place Saturday afternoon at the Sigel residence in Clearville and was conducted by Rev. D. G. Hetrick, who was assisted by Rev. James Troutman of the Christian Church and Rev. G. M. Frownter of the M. E. Church, each of the clergymen made a short address. Interment was made at Everett.

Mr. Sigel was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church and lived a quiet simple life as son, husband, father and citizen. He was an expert carpenter and had during his life worked at Saxton, Everett, Bedford and other points throughout the county and was well and favorably known.

The pall bearers were Lyman Grove, George Cooper, Samuel Pennell, Henry Fletcher, James M. Leasure and Henry Weimer.

Home Destroyed

Last Friday afternoon one of our oldest landmarks, a brick house owned by Charles L. Colfelt and occupied by Charles L. Dallas and family, was totally destroyed by fire. Mr. and Mrs. Dallas were attending the Fair at the time and neighbors saved the parlor furniture. The loss is estimated at $4,000, the insurance having expired about nine weeks ago.

On the last day of the Fair in October 1881, the house owned by Matthew Pierson's heirs and occupied by the families of Amos Diehl and William Wolf was burned. The occupants lost all their goods, except some stock and grain, which was stored in an old grist mill, which within one month took fire from some unknown cause and burned. Mr. Diehl's loss was a heavy one. The mill was owned by Scott Stuckey and run by the late William Wolf.

Votes to be a Station

The Church of God at Saxton held a congregational meeting Sunday evening, September 28. It was one of the largest ever held by the church. By unanimous vote it agreed to ask the Eldership to separate Saxton from the Six Mile Run part of the field and make Saxton, Coalport and the Ridges a charge. Rev. F. W. McGuire, who has been pastor of the entire charge for the past ten years, was made the unanimous choice for pastor. The East Pennsylvania Eldership meets in Elizabethtown this week.

"That Million Dollar Look!"

Go and see This Wonderful Photo-Play---To Appear at The Dreamland Theatre Saturday Night, October 11

At my own private and personal expense, I have brought to this town one of the greatest picture-plays that has ever been produced.

For years, I have been waiting and hoping for some book, or play, or sermon that would make clear the powerful lesson that this picture shows. It is a lesson that means greater success---business success, social success, personal success to every man who will take it home to himself---and apply it in his daily living.

I brought this picture to The Dreamland because I believe that every red-corporated American man who sees it can reap a profit from it---and become a bigger man through it---and I want to do my share to get it before as many folks right here at home as I can. It's helped me---I want you to enjoy its help too.

I am not going to spoil your enjoyment, your "thrill" and your excitement by telling you here what the story is. Wait and enjoy the surprise for yourself.

I'm simply going on record with the statement that it will grip you from the first exposure to the last scene---and make you say a hundred times "Why wasn't this picture ever thought of before?"

Men have lost untold opportunities; have sacrificed dearest ambitions; have handicapped the hopes of years, purely and solely through a lack of the knowledge that this picture vividly and dramatically imparts.

Men have euhred themselves out of big business gains, have closed the doors to countless success chances, have defeated themselves, not only in business, but in politics, in society---YES, EVEN IN LOVE---because they never studied and mastered the lesson that this picture makes clear to them.

If you want to play the game of success skillfully and victoriously; if you want to be a dominating factor in life's power circles---

Then don't Fail to See "That Million Dollar Look" at Dreamland Theatre Oct. 11

October 1—Miss Margaretta Crenner of Huntingdon is spending a few days with friends in the Valley.

Miss Catherine Sturgis of Philadelphia is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Howsare.

Charles Hite, wife and son, of Ralplton, Somerset County, were visiting friends and relatives here last week.

Philip Barnett and wife spent a few days last week at the home of Mrs. Barnett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cessna.

Misses Edna and Magdalene Wertz returned to Altoona on Wednesday, after spending a week with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wertz.

D. W. Snyder, better known as "Phillip's Boy," editor of the Cumberland Alleganian, passed through this neck of woods one day last week, and spent the night with his friend, C. A. Wertz. "Phillip's Boy" may be a good editor, but a mighty poor driver, for he don't know how to hitch up a horse properly.

The following people were entertained at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Howsare on Sunday: Roy Rose of Philadelphia, Calvin Nave and wife, Harvey Nave, Ross Rose and Perry Hite and wife, of Centerville, and Frank Mann and wife of The Arandale, Bedford.

Mr. Cooper and wife and Mr. Piper and wife, of Altoona, Mr. Crider, wife, son and daughter, of Greensburg, Louis Saupp, Corle Smith and wife, of Bedford, Charles Fletcher and Edwin and John Wertz, of Imertown, Sundayed with Charles A. Wertz and family.

Mrs. Ambrose Wertz and children were visiting at Harry Raley's near Bedford last week.

Ross Drenning and family spent Sunday down in South Cumberland Valley.

Abner White of Pittsburgh is home with his family for a few days.

Defiance

October 1—Stanley Cleaves and Jesse Ritchey were Sunday callers at the homes of Philip Ritchey and Joseph Cleaves at Raven Run.

The Broad Top Township High School boys, under the management of Assistant Principal L. L. Smith, will play the Huntingdon High School at a game of football at Huntingdon on Saturday, October 25, and will play the Everett High School team at Everett on October 4.

Mrs. Fred Showalter of Kearney and Mrs. Pleacher of Wolfsburg were at Defiance the first part of this week calling at the home of their mother, Mrs. McClellan Thomas, who has been ill for some time and who does not seem to be improving.

Mrs. H. H. Brumbaugh and Miss Stella Mobus were business visitors to Everett one day last week.

William Black is making considerable improvements to his property on Main Street.

Norman Gracey has sold his lot to Charles Fox. This looks as though Defiance will lose Mr. Gracey.

John W. Brumbaugh made a bicycle trip to Roaring Spring last Friday and returned Sunday afternoon.

Robert Hughes took the following persons to Roaring Spring last Sunday in his automobile: Bertha Aldstadt, James Aldstadt, James Hodges and Roy Bollman. These were over to call on F. V. Aldstadt, father of Bertha and James Aldstadt, who is at the Nason Hospital for treatment and where he expects to undergo an operation. Mrs. Aldstadt is staying with him until after the operation at least.

The Teacher Training Class of the M. E. Sunday School of Defiance took their first examination last Thursday evening.

Owing to the funeral services of Aaron Foster having been conducted by Rev. Willard, there were no services in the M. E. Church at Defiance last Sunday afternoon.

Roy Aldstadt of Morrisdale and Mrs. Howard Rhinard of Everett attended the funeral of May Aldstadt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Aldstadt, last Friday. May was aged eight years, six months and 12 days. While she was quite young yet she suffered much and the large attendance at the funeral showed that she had made many friends during her short life and long illness.

We understand that one of our former townsmen, Seibert Young, who left Defiance for the West about one year ago, expects to drop into our village next week some day with the intention of locating among us again. We hope that he and Mrs. Young had a very pleasant time during their trip and we unite in extending to them a cordial welcome.

Point

October 1—Mrs. Samuel McIlwaine spent last week visiting her daughter, Mrs. Rhoda Waite, and other friends in Altoona.

Oppenheimer Leadership in Medium Priced Ready-for-Service Clothes is Once More Strikingly Demonstrated Oppenheimer styles for fall and winter show the touch of the artist-designer.

They stand apart from the usual run of medium priced clothes and by right of merit force an alignment with garments selling at half again to double the prices.

Oppenheimer style perfection is not a matter of chance.

It dominates the medium price ready-for-service field because back of it are dependable fabrics, right materials, skillful hand tailoring and honesty of purpose.

It merely reflects the Oppenheimer organization, which for 58 years has been dominated by a spirit of thoroughness that permeates every detail of the business.

Lesson I.—Fourth Quarter, For
Oct. 5, 1913.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Num. xi, 10-18; 24, 25—Memory Verses, 14, 15—Golden Text, Jas. v, 16—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The record of Israel's forty years between Egypt and Canaan is confined to the first two years and part of the last year; about thirty-eight years are a blank, because of their rebellion at Kadesh Barnea and refusal to possess the land. Thirteen years of Abram's life are a blank because of Hagar (Gen. xvi, 16; xvii, 1). The ninety-three years of the captivity in the days of the Judges are not counted (Judg. iii, S, 14; iv, 3; vi, 1; xiii, 1), and that explains the seeming discrepancy between the 480 from the Exodus to the fourth year of Solomon (I Kings, vi, 1) and the 573 years of Acts xiii, 18-22. The present age since the refraction of their Messiah is also a blank in Israel's story. It is between the sixty-ninth and seventieth week of Dan. ix, 24-27.

This great principle of time lost when out of fellowship with God should make the believer very careful as to how he spends his time, for all is lost that is not for God. We have seen that in the third month from Egypt they came to Sinai, and a glance at the map will show that it need not have taken them as long from Sinai to the land of Canaan, but Deut. i, 2 tells us that it was only eleven days' journey from Horeb to Kadesh Barnea.

We have noticed that while Moses was in the Mount with God the first forty days he received full instructions concerning the building of the tabernacle, and in Ex. xi, 17, we read that the tabernacle was finished and set up on the first day of the first month of the second year.

On the day that the tabernacle was set up the princes of Israel brought their offerings, and although each brought exactly the same, there is a full and detailed record of each one's gifts (Num. vii, 1-89). On the anniversary of their leaving Egypt they kept the passover on the 14th day of the first month of the second year (Num. ix, 1-3).

On the first day of the second month of the second year they began to number the people (Num. i, 1), and on the 20th day of the second month of the second year the cloud was taken up and they started on their first journey from Sinai, a three days' journey, the ark of the covenant of the Lord going before them to search out a resting place for them (Num. x, 11, 33). With such patient loving care and guidance and the assurance of the constant presence of the Lord in the cloud by day and the fire by night and the manna every morning, we might expect to find a wondrously contented and happy people, but the testimony of Moses was that from the day they left Egypt they had been rebellious against the Lord, and the Lord's own testimony was that they were a stiff-necked people (Deut. ix, 7, 13, 24).

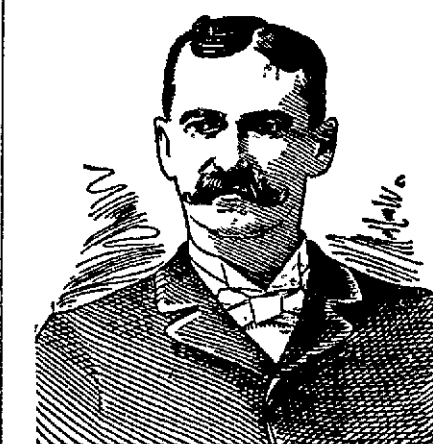

We have seen them, murmuring at Marah and in the wilderness of sin and at Rephidim, before they came to Sinai, and now they have scarcely got away from Sinai when they are again complaining and weeping and finding fault with the manna and longing for the fish and vegetables of Egypt and despising the Lord (chapter xi, 1-9, 20).

We have seen Aaron failing suddenly, and now Moses seems very much cast down as we hear him say, "I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me" (verse 14). When the Lord said that He would give the people all the flesh they could eat for a whole month, Moses seemed to forget to keep his shoes off (Ex. ix, 5), and asked, "Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them to suffice them?" Even Joshua also gives way to himself when he says concerning the prophesying of Eldad and Madad, "My Lord, Moses, forbid them" (verses 27-29).

We think of John, whom Jesus loved, saying concerning a certain one, "We forbade him because he followeth not with us" (Luke ix, 49). What a trial we must all be to our Lord, and where is there any one qualified to throw a stone at another? Surely, we all need more patience and meekness. Many things in our lives are too heavy for us, but nothing is too hard for the Lord, and our song should ever be, "He is able" (Jer. xxxii, 17; Dan. iii, 17). He can provide spirit controlled helpers as He did for Moses (verses 16, 17), and He who could send manna from heaven every morning for all Israel could just as easily give them flesh. Had Moses forgotten the quails of Ex. xvi, 12? We cannot but think of the day when the hungry thousands were about our Lord, and the disciples would have sent them away, and to prove Philip He asked him how they could feed them. He all the time knowing what He would do. The replies of Philip and Andrew and the way that the Lord did feed the 5,000 have many a time kept me from presuming to think how He might do this or that (John vi, 4-11).

No, the Lord's hand is never waxed short, but our inquiries do often hinder (verse 23; Isa. i, 2; lxx, 1). We have every reason to say, "The Lord God will help me, therefore shall I not be confounded; therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed" (Isa. i, 7). Isa. i 10 is also grand for perplexed people.

MEMNONITE S. S. CONVENTION

First Annual Meeting in Napier Township—Report of Proceedings.

The first annual Sunday School Convention held in Napier Mennonite Church, Saturday and Sunday, September 20 and 21, 1913, was well attended. A very great interest was taken in the work and shows the people of this part of the country cares not for the rain when they can go to the house of worship. We hope this convention will be a help to the Sunday School and church workers of this place.

The Nominating Committee were R. F. Orr, Asa Shaffer and William Ferguson. The following officers were elected: Moderator, C. W. Blackburn; Assistant Moderator, George Kimmel; Secretary, Miss Jennie Cable; Assistant Secretary, Grover Dull; Chorister, T. R. Studebaker.

Saturday evening session opened at 7 o'clock. Devotional services were conducted by C. W. Blackburn who read the first Psalm, Rev. A. G. Snyder then led in prayer; Hymn, "Stand Up for Jesus;" Convention Sermon was preached by Rev. H. G. Snyder. He spoke from the 10th chapter and 10th verse of St. John; he told his hearers how necessary it is to have the abundant life to do God's will and our duty in his service, and if we have the abundant life it will not be a task for us to live a Christian life and do our duty in His service. Hymn, "Tis so Sweet to Trust in Jesus." The first question, "Why Have We Met?" R. F. Orr was the first speaker, who said first of all we should meet to honor and glorify our Saviour; to get nearer to Him who saves us from all sin, also to learn of some new idea of improving our Sunday School. T. R. Studebaker said we should meet in the house of worship to meet Christ, and if we come with this intention we will not be disappointed. Hymn,

"More About Jesus," was sung. Rev. H. G. Snyder spoke on the same subject. He gave us a few very good ideas why we should meet and how necessary it is for us to meet in Sunday School and other services of God. Mr. Attie and C. W. Blackburn were the last speakers, who gave us some very interesting thoughts. An offering was then lifted. Hymn "We'll Never Say Good-bye." Benediction by Rev. Abram Snyder of Roaring Springs.

Sunday morning sessions opened at 10 o'clock. Devotional Services were conducted by Rev. Snyder. Hymn, "More About Jesus." Address of Welcome by Peter Smith, who gave everyone a hearty welcome. Hymn, "Lead Me On." Question, "The Influence of a Sunday School in a Community." The speakers were Asa Shaffer, Rev. Adair and Samuel McIlwaine, who gave very good talks. Second question, "The Need of the Holy Spirit in Sunday School Work," Sylvester Mickel and Martin Shaffer were to be the speakers, but as they could not be present Rev. H. G. Snyder was appointed as speaker, who gave a very interesting talk. The third question, "Qualifications of a Sunday School Teacher," Rev. H. G. Snyder and Rev. S. D. Yoder spoke on this question and we are sure if we had more teachers like these two workers who are willing and ready to work for Jesus at any time or any place they may be called, there would be more souls saved and prepared to work for their Heavenly Father. Hymn, "Is Not This the Land of Beulah." Offering was then lifted. Closing Hymn, "Nearer My God, to Thee." Benediction, Rev. H. G. Snyder.

Sunday afternoon session was opened at 1:30 by singing "More About Jesus." Devotional services were conducted by Rev. S. D. Yoder, who read the 24th chapter of I Corinthians. Hymns, "My Jesus, I Love Thee" and "We'll Work Till Jesus Comes." Children's services were to be conducted by Mr. H. Kensinger, but as Mr. Kensinger could not be present Rev. S. D. Yoder was appointed to take charge of the children. Rev. Yoder and the children sang, "Praise the Lord." He then asked the little ones some very interesting questions. The children gave their best attention while Rev. Yoder talked with them. We know if Rev. Yoder had more of our children to teach there would be more obedient children and more young Christian workers. Question, "Must I Join a Church to Become a Christian?" Rev. H. G. Snyder was the first speaker. He said we should join a church to have fellowship one with another and that it will be a help to us to know we have a home church to worship in with our brother; he also gave us some very interesting thoughts on the subject. Mr. W. Slick also spoke on the subject and said if we join a church it will be a help to our children and they will feel as if they should join a church with their parents, and it will be a help in leading a young Christian life. C. W. Blackburn said we need not join a church to become a Christian, but we must become a Christian to join a church. S. H. Mickel said it was useful for us to join a church because it will help us in a Christian life to do God's will. Rev. Snyder spoke again on the subject. He gave us some very soul thrilling thoughts. Rev. Yoder said we must join a church to become a Christian, and it must be the church of Jesus Christ, our blessed Saviour. There is only one church and when Jesus calls His children home they will belong to this one church.

Second question, "The Sunday School as a Factor in Promoting Early Piety." S. H. Mickel said we should all start early, and it will be a great help to us as we grow older and see the necessity of leading a Christian life. The question, "The Need of the Holy Spirit in Sunday School," was again taken up. S. H.

Mickel said we need the Holy Spirit in Sunday School to have a prospering class. And to have the Holy Spirit with us we must commune with God daily. T. R. Studebaker said we need the Holy Spirit to have a successful Sunday School. It is very necessary for the superintendent and teachers to be filled with the Holy Spirit to teach sinners God's word and lead them to Jesus.

Question, "Christ's Methods of Teaching and Their Application." Rev. S. D. Yoder was first speaker. C. W. Blackburn second. Both gave very good talks. Hymn, "Holy Spirit, Faithful Guide." The following resolutions were read by Rev. Snyder:

1. Be it Resolved, That we thank our Heavenly Father for permitting us to meet in our past annual Sunday School Convention.

2. That we thank the people of Napier for their hospitality and entertainment.

3. That we note with pleasure the fraternal feeling among the workers of the several Sunday Schools of this community for being of no denominational distinction.

4. That we recommend that a copy of the minutes be published in the Bedford and the Mennonite papers.

5. Resolved, That we extend an invitation to the Napier District Sunday School Association to hold the second annual convention at this district.

Sunday evening session opened at 7 o'clock. The Secretary was not able to attend the evening session, therefore we cannot give a full report. The program was as follows: Devotional Services by Rev. Jacob Snyder; workers meeting, led by William Ferguson; question, "The Responsibility of the Primary Teacher," Miss Ella Davis and T. R. Studebaker; "The Reward of the Faithful Worker," Irvin Earnest and C. W. Blackburn; Offering; Adjournment. Jennie Cable.

SHINGLES

Five cars 18 inch Eureka Red Cedar Shingles were shipped to us from the coast at intervals, but the first cars were held up at the lake ports and now we find that all five will reach us about the same time. This is more than our storage room will accommodate and rather than pay demurrage on the cars we are willing to give our customers the benefit of this. These are the same high grade stock we have been shipping all year and if you send us your order at once we will make the price $4.40 F. O. B. Johnstown. The freight on these to your station would be from 14 to 20 cents per thousand. Send us your order and they will be shipped as soon as cars arrive, which will be in from five to ten days.

THE ROSE COMB REDS.

When those Rhode Islanders were casting about for material to make a great utility fowl they must have been stuck on red and had the idea that red roosters have the maximum of vigor and production, for in manufacturing the Rhode Island Reds they mixed Red Malays, Red Cochins, R. C. Brown Leghorns and threw in a few other breeds for variety. They didn't miss it either for the Rhode Island Red, New England's national bird, is certainly a crackerjack.

Reds come in two varieties, single and rose comb and hold their own with any breed here and across the pond as a dual purpose breed.

The Rose Comb, with the exception of its headgear is the same as the other and is built along utility lines for fine flesh and egg production.

It is sturdy, has that oblong shape that means eggs and carries an unusual amount of meat on its compact carcass.

Its pretty plump breast makes it great for broilers, all set off with a gold tinged skin that is the ideal of American buyers.

The hens are fine layers of nice brown eggs and do not knock off for zero weather, their thick feathering and rose combs making them almost impervious to cold. They are quick in movement, great foragers, good sitters and mothers, and the chicks are strong and fast growers.

Real Reds are beautiful. They are velvety red with some black in wing, and the tail mainly black with glistening greenish sheen.

RED STANDARD WEIGHTS.

Cook 8½ lbs. Hen 6½ lbs.
Cockerel 7½ lbs. Pullet 5 lbs.

DON'TS.

Don't cry over spilled eggs. If Bidy breaks them give her a better nest. Don't feed any grain exclusively. Variety for the hen as well as men.

Don't feed leftover mash in hot weather. It soon sours and causes scours. Blowflies blow, maggots grow, and your chickens go.

Don't choose a torrid, lurid summer resort for your summer vacation. Spend it on the farm among the mountains, green fields, the wild flowers and singing birds and you will be better off morally, mentally, physically and financially.

Don't write us commending "Poultry Notes" and then not pay for your paper. Praise without works is dead. Don't fail to look on the bright side. You thus reflect the light and help to make life bright.

Don't always be talking about the high cost of living. Remember every time your jaw runs adds to the running expenses.

Don't be an ultra conservative, but keep the brake scraping on your enthusiasm or it may run away with your judgment.

Don't argue with a customer and try to make him believe that his ideas are foolish. Cater to the whims of your trade. That's how money is made.

MAY GOD BLESS HIM!

He is off to the fellow who tells a good joke

And makes the people laugh.
O jollity, I do love thee!
You're wholesome wine to quaff.

The man who turns a frown to a smile
And cheers a drooping heart
May not be in the Hall of Fame,
But he does a noble part.

Just think now of the cheery smile
He passes round all day
It's like a ray of sunshine
Or a fragrant big bouquet.

He smiles and laughs; they smile and laugh.
It feels good—well, you bet!
He told me a good joke today.
Ha, ha! I'm laughing yet.

If a cannon shot sounds round the world
Why can't a good laugh too?
My friend, you cannot estimate
The good a laugh can do.

So get the laughing habit, friend;
Engage in jollity.
It wards off the dyspepsia
And makes the heart care free.

God bless the man who makes me laugh,
And may his tribe increase,
And may pernicious pessimism
Upon this good earth cease!

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS

Q. Last winter my ducks seemed to have rheumatism. Are they subject to this? My ducks sleep on a dry earth floor. A. Ducks quickly go off their legs on damp, hard or cold floors. Their plaster droppings make it almost impossible to keep an earth floor dry unless it is continually scraped and something spread over it to dry the moisture. Their feet get cold quickly, and they can't stand that. If you bed your quacks dry and deep their lameness will cease.

Q. Why is the Cayuga duck, the only true American duck, not more popular in this country? It certainly is fine eating. A. Its feathers are black. American cooks hate black pin feathers, and a black duck is horrid to pick.

Q. I have noticed that Fowls at shows often get the feather eating habit and thus pass it around when they return home. Is this caused by lack of an element in ration or what? A. Fowls at shows are idle. They have nothing to do but endure the public gaze. So they just form themselves into mutual admiration societies and proceed to remove each others garments.

Q. Would you recommend sawdust for scratch material and for the dropping boards? A. For neither. On the floor it will get mixed with the feed, and that means indigestion and death.

Q. I have pure bred Brown Leghorn chicks here whose parents show no sign of white and didn't when young, and yet these young ones show some white in tail, wing and breast. What could cause it? A. Likely overcrowding at night. They may molt them out before adult age.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

It is said the egg trust, in attempts to "block the Householders' league in its crusade against high prices, shipped large quantities of eggs over into Canada and paid a duty on them of 1½ cents per dozen. There were too many eggs, however, for these exports to affect the supply, and the women come out ahead, anyhow.

The farmers' wives of this country produce most of our billion dollar poultry product, and the government tells us the farm hen averages but sixty eggs per year. The thoroughbred hens at the Storrs (Conn.) and Missouri egg contests averaged 153 and 154 per hen respectively. We do not agree that the farm hen lays but sixty eggs per year, but it's a sure thing that if more farmers bought their wives pure bred birds the farm poultry products and poultry profits would boom immensely.

This year at the Allentown (Pa.) fair prizes will be offered for the laying and meat type of chicken. The winners in the meat type will be killed and dressed after the ribbons are up, so the farmers and fanciers may see what the judge considers a No. 1 type of market chicken is.

There is a movement on foot to secure state aid for poultry shows. We believe the state should first make adequate appropriations for poultry research on its experiment station, for poultry lectures at farmers' institutes and town associations. Then let the state establish a state show, county or district shows for the exhibition of utility poultry and eggs and place the appropriation and management in responsible hands.

Some farmers will spend $100 to jail the man who stole a bushel of corn, but they won't spend a red cent for traps, poisons or repairs to stop the rats and mice that devour and destroy bushels and bushels of grain in the fields, and barn, and granary, and corncrib, and cellar on their farms every year.

A case holding thirty dozen eggs is most too large to be filled promptly from the average farm flock, thus there is often a wait before the case is filled and part of the eggs deteriorate. A six or twelve dozen case is better and means better eggs and better pleased and better paying trade.

Mrs. John Weckesser of Bayonne, N. J., had the police court clerk issue a summons against the rooster of Mrs. Goldweber for assault and battery on her eighteen-month-old baby. If there is a preacher on the jury that poor rooster is sure to get it in the neck.

Two foolish ways to use louse powder or moth balls is to put them in the dust box and the nest. This is simply waste, and the balls are apt to spoil egg embryos. The bugs are on the fowl, and the killer should be worked down through the feathers to the skin, where it will do execution.

An Opportunity Lost

By MARGARET BARR

In feudal times, when the now ruined castles on the river Rhine were alive with people, there lay dying in one of them Count Hallenstein, its owner. There had long been a feud between the count and Baron Hafstrom, a neighbor, who, learning of his enemy's illness, designed, as soon as he, the latter, died, to step in and take possession of the castle and estate. The count's son and heir, Herman, was at the time of his father's illness returning from the university where he had been studying and had been recalled to his home.

The messenger who summoned him also informed him that Baron Hafstrom was watching for him to waylay and make him a prisoner, that at his father's death there would be no head to the Hallenstein vassals to offer resistance and that he might hold the heir to do with him as he chose. Herman set out on horseback with the messenger, Ludwig Ritter, to return to his dying father. In order that he might outwit those lying in wait for him, he concluded that Ritter should personate a knight, and he, Herman, would act as his servant. So they changed garments and proceeded in this fashion, Herman riding behind Ludwig.

One evening when they were not far distant from Hallenstein castle they stopped at the house in the center of a large vineyard, whose owner, August Bauer, entertained them hospitably, according to the custom of the country. Gretchen, Bauer's daughter, was a comely girl, eighteen years old, an age at which young girls are especially interested in the opposite sex. She could not but notice the difference between the two strangers, the master being ill at ease in playing a role that was novel to him, and the courtly manners of his servant.

Herman before setting out had instructed Ludwig not to defer to him in any way—indeed, to treat him rather harshly, the better to carry out the deception. Bauer told Ludwig that Baron Hafstrom's men had been to the vineyard that day looking for Herman Hallenstein, and Herman, fearing that he might be taken for the master instead of the man, instructed Ludwig to redouble his harsh treatment, whereupon Ludwig, while Herman was waiting on him, feigning to be displeased with his servant, rated him soundly, indulging his pretended ire so far as to strike him.

Herman bore his treatment meekly, but Gretchen's eyes flashed fire. She said nothing at the time, but when alone with Herman sympathized with him and offered, if he wished to leave his master's service, to ask her father to give him employment in the grape culture. It occurred to Herman that it might be well to accept the offer and send Ludwig ahead to find a passage through Baron Hafstrom's men. So Gretchen went to her father with the request, which was granted, and Herman was set to trimming vines, while Ludwig, after abusing his man for leaving his service, went on.

Gretchen, who was infatuated with Herman, went out to where he was at work and spent a great deal of her time chatting with him. This angered her father, who was a wealthy man and had no idea of permitting his daughter to become involved with a servant. He reprimanded her, but it was too late. Young hearts need but a spark to start an unquenchable flame. Since Gretchen could not meet Herman openly she met him in secret.

On the second day after Ludwig's departure he returned. He had found an unguarded avenue to the castle. The count had died while he was there, but he had instructed the countess to keep his death a secret till Herman had arrived. Ludwig now proposed that Herman should obtain clothing from Gretchen and proceed as a girl. So Herman told Gretchen that he was a political fugitive and asked her to let him have her clothes by which to make his escape. She readily consented and brought him what he needed. Arraying himself in her belongings, painting his cheeks and powdering his face, he started. Gretchen accompanying him till he had traversed the more frequented part of the distance and passed several bands of men watching for him. The two journeying together so aided the deception that Herman asked her to go on with him till his safety had been assured.

Leaving the main road, they entered a defile in the high hills that bordered on the Rhine, which Ludwig had found unguarded. A band had since occupied it, but the travelers climbed a hill, and passed on above them. In this way they avoided several parties and at last entered the castle.

Gretchen was much astonished to see her companion, when he had thrown off his feminine apparel, receive the homage of his vassals. After an interview with his mother and the funeral of his father he placed himself at the head of his retainers, sallied forth and scattered the bands that had been looking for him.

Baron Hafstrom, seeing that the opportunity had eluded him, gave up the idea of appropriating Hallenstein castle and withdrew his forces. Gretchen became Herman's wife and brought him a fine fortune, with a part of which he strengthened the defenses of his castle and otherwise bettered his condition.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD

No Other Newspaper in the World

Gives so Much at so Low a Price.

The great political campaigns are now at hand, and you want the news accurately and promptly. The World long since established a record for impartiality, and anybody can afford its Thrice-a-Week edition, which comes every other day in the week, except Sunday. The Thrice-a-Week World also abounds in other strong features, serial stories, humor, markets, cartoons; in fact, everything that is to be found in a first-class daily.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Gazette, together for one year for $2.20. The regular price of the two papers is $2.50.

A Good Investment for the Family

In these days of wide vision and broad interests, when what happens at a distance is often of as much concern to intelligent folk as what happens in their own communities, every family ought to subscribe for at least one well-edited city newspaper. For people who measure newspaper value by quality rather than by bulk, there is none better for the purpose of keeping in touch with the progress of events at home and abroad than The Philadelphia Record.

The Philadelphia Record is clean, alert and reliable. It prints the news without color or distortion, as concisely as possible, but always readably. It is a recognized authority on sports, household affairs and fashions. Its market quotations are the standard by which transactions in farm products are governed throughout the territory it serves. Thorough coverage of the news fields of its own and neighboring states has always been a valuable Record feature, and one which its army of readers in the smaller cities and towns of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland appreciate.

There is information and entertainment in The Philadelphia Record for every member of the family, and a subscription to that newspaper is a profitable investment in the interest of the home.

Hermann-Heltzel

At high noon, Wednesday of last week, at Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Heltzel's, Bedford Township, the nuptial rites were administered by Rev. E. A. G. Hermann, Reformed pastor of Cessna, uniting Miss Mary Myrtle Heltzel and Charles A. Hermann in the holy bonds of wedlock.

The house was beautifully decorated. The stairway was draped in evergreen. The parlor decorations were arranged in three pyramids of evergreen, interspersed with Kaisers, a deep red flower, and white chrysanthemums. This little triangular retreat served as the altar at which the happy couple were made as one. The bride party entered the parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Ethel Koonitz. The beautiful ring ceremony was used. Little Miss Dorothy Hermann served as flower girl and Mrs. E. A. G. Hermann was matron of honor. After congratulations from the friends present the dining room was thrown open, which was decorated in pink and white. The three large tables were laden with everything which could be mentioned to appease a good appetite.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heltzel, a young lady of marked influence and refinement and held in high esteem by her host of friends. The groom is a prominent young florist of Frederick, Md. The bride received many beautiful and useful presents.

The happy couple left on the evening train to take their honeymoon in Washington, D. C., and all surrounding points of interest, after which they will be at home to their friends at Frederick, Md.

They have the best wishes of their many friends for a long and prosperous journey over the matrimonial sea. The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Hermann, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Heltzel, Rev. and Mrs. E. A. G. Hermann and daughter Dorothy, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Zimmers, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Heltzel, Mr. Charles Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. P. Barkman, Mr. and Mrs. George I. Ickes, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Reighard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koonitz and daughter Olive, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. D.
